95 Per Cent 'Waste' Useful

22 Household Items Listed As Valuable To U. S. in Fighting Foo.

CHICAGO—Uncle Sam, in his war-time role of junk collector, can use just about 95 per cent of the stuff people are throwing away.

Some field workers of the federal bureau of industrial conservation regard this estimate as conservative in the light of industry's enormous appetite for old rags, waste paper, old rubber and scrap metals.

In every state and almost every community there have begun campaigns to convince householders that they can contribute far more to the "salvage for victory" program than a stack of newspapers or the waste of tinful Junior has been saving since he was six.

They want last year's license plates and your old tableware. They'll be just as pleased to get a wire fence, garden tools, kids' hand-and-hand saws, or a car. Grease from the kitchen is the best of all, and next it may be old bones.

Scrap Drives Successful.

Tin cans about as much as the bureau hasn't been able to work into the program. They may find a use for them before the war's much older.

Slowly but steadily the campaigns are showing results. In Illinois, where State Salvage Director Daniel Levene said the program had been especially successful, hundreds of persons are delivering grease to their butchers, razor blades to their barbers and empty toothpaste tubes to the corner drug store.

A big drive conducted by the Daily Newspaper, a Bloomington (Ill.) newspaper, brought in 2,427 sets of old automobile license plates. They weighed 1,820 pounds, and scrap dealers estimated that when the metal was put on the market it would release enough virgin steel to make 300 Garand rifles.

In the metal division, the campaigns put clothes hangers, pipe, wire, fencing, garden tools, kids' cars, garbage cans, fireplace equipment, and many other things to steel mills, buckets, casters and steel wool.

Rubber goods included gloves, car and bath mats, ballroom shoes, sporting goods, hoses and soles and heels.

Complete collection figures are hard to arrive at, but the Chicago salvage committee found out that, in a five-week period this year, collection of waste paper was up roughly 25 per cent to a total of 48,897 tons.

Another thing the conservation bureau's field workers are trying to put across is the use of which all of the arms and supplies going to Britain, Russia and China are packed in waterproof paperboard boxes. Army ordnance plants alone use 30 tons of paper a month to pack shells.

There are hundreds of uses for scrap iron and steel in the manufacture of tanks, airplanes, naval vessels, guns and ammunition. Twenty per cent of our lead supply is derived from scrap. Copper goes into brass casings for artillery, anti-aircraft and anti-tank cartridges and shells. One variety of bomber now in production requires two miles of copper wire for plane.

Army Will Forward Mail To Soldiers on Microfilm

WASHINGTON.—The army is setting up machinery to facilitate delivery of mail to soldiers at distant places by the use of microfilm.

In this process, letters to soldiers are opened and photographed on the film. The film will be sent by airplane, after which each letter will be enlarged and delivered to the recipient. This procedure is expected to save weeks over the old way of sending.

Secretary Stimson said that the army was handling 1,000,000 pieces of mail a day, requiring 1,000 soldiers in its own postal service.

ATTACK! ATTACK! ATTACK!

America's attitude on both the fighting front and the home front today is what it should be.

We're having the inflationary kick here at home, too. Prices are high.

At least 10% of his pay in War Bonds is a good idea.

Join the attack now!
